Nelsons—Mother And Sons

as we see it

Europe's first television network will include stations in eight different countries. Microwave relays in Britain and on the Continent soon will make it possible for the same program to be seen simultaneously in the United Kingdom, France, Italy, West Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland and Denmark.

Each country will originate at least one program for the network during the first months of its operation. While the United States cannot join this live broadcast network at the outset, we certainly could provide film to be telecast over its facilities.

Our Voice of America for some time has made available to individual European stations such information shows as Industry on Parade and This Land of Ours. Each film is accompanied by a script in the language of the foreign announcer. Soon three more programs will be offered—The Voice of Firestone, The World Through Stamps and The Magic of the Atom, which describes peacetime uses of atomic energy.

Commercial telecasters and film producers also are sending to individual stations such items as Ed Murrow's Person to Person, Hopalong Cassidy, Dragnet and Amos 'n' Andy.

We believe that with the establishment of a network in Europe, we have an unusual opportunity to show Europeans a roundup of the best of our TV fare, not to propagandize them, but to help them understand us by understanding the things we like. It should not be too difficult for us to have an hour or two set aside for an American show.

Any arrangement made should include provision for film of European network shows to be telecast here. Understanding works both ways.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

New Lassie telefilm series takes over the Sunday-night-at-7:00 period on CBS starting next fall. What happens to Life with Father, currently occupying that time, hasn't been decided . . . It's definite now that STEVE ALLEN's new Tonight program, designed as a counterpart of DAVE GARROWAY's early-bird Today, starts in the fall from 11:30 P.M. to 1 A.M. five nights weekly.

After weeks of contract hassels with her sponsor, LORETTA YOUNG has been renewed for next season with her Letter to Loretta show . . . RED BUTTONS' future status, meanwhile, looks shaky. Despite a steady stream of new writers and a new format, RED's rating has been steadily dropping. As a result, his show may be canceled.

NBC's newest affiliate station is YVKS-TV, in Caracas, Venezuela. The station will receive NBC kinescopes and telefilm shows . . . Special half-hour Civil Defense show will be telecast on ABC June 12 as a prelude to the first Nation-wide civil defense test June 14 . . . Cavalcade of Sports expected to use sports films as summer replacement for its Friday night fights.

JIMMY POWERS signed to narrate a new 15-minute telefilm series, The Big Playback . . . The new variety program from Atlantic City's Steel Pier on ABC goes Sunday nights, starting either June 6 or 13. PAUL WHITEMAN will be featured.

WALTER GREAZA, the Chief of T-Men in Action, has reconsidered and will move to Hollywood to continue on the show when it switches to film next fall . . . AUDREY MEADOWS and RUSSELL NYPE signed as two of the panelists for a new quiz show, What's in a Word, scheduled to debut on CBS in June. CLIFTON FADIMAN is moderator and PETER ARNELL will produce.

HENRY SALOMON, JR., who produced Victory at Sea, working on four new documentaries for NBC. One, dealing with the A-bomb and H-bomb, will be titled "Fusion and Fission" . . . New Monday night boxing series from Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway starts May 17 on ABC. The show was formerly telecast on Du Mont.

Texaco, MILTON BERLE's ex-sponsor, returns in the fall with a new, half-hour version of Comedy Hour, complete with rotating stars and name guests . . . Planning far ahead, Studio One has scheduled for next Oct. 18 an original play entitled "The Boy Who Changed the World," depicting THOMAS A. EDISON's early years. It's to honor the 75th anniversary of the incandescent lamp.

HOLLYWOOD

Dan Jenkins reports:

Apparently topping SID CAESAR in the dubious race over the most expensive show, BOB HOPE's little ventures before the TV cameras next season reportedly will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 apiece, not including network time charges of around $60,000. But he'll do only six shows, thus keeping his total tab just under $1,000,000 . . . But that's really nothing. NBC's upcoming monthly "spectaculars" probably will cost $250,000 each, what with color and a 90-minute format.

Don't laugh at the piano player. LIBERACE's show is now seen in no less than 188 cities every week . . . MILTON BERLE will do his last three shows of the season from here. He'll also appear as a guest on EDDIE CANTOR's last Comedy Hour May 16. And there's even a rumor that BERLE will turn to film next season . . . CBS is preparing a new live show, Hale The Colonel, with PAUL DOUGLAS.

PHILLIP BONNELL, 10-year-old son of GALE STORM, makes his acting debut in an upcoming My Little Margie episode . . . NBC and ALAN YOUNG have finally gotten together on a series idea, That's Life, to be filmed here . . . The network has also decided to use the current radio Gildersleeve, WILLARD WATERMAN, in the filmed TV version of the show . . . It's SHELLEY WINTERS for the next JIMMY DURANTE show on the Comedy Hour.

LUCY and DESI are vacationing for five weeks in Palm Springs, but Desilu is still busy. BILL ASHER, director of I Love Lucy, is turning out a pilot film based on a woman attorney and starring JUNE HAVOC.

LOIS COLLIER, of the Boston Blackie series, makes an appearance soon on one of the DENNIS DAY shows . . . ABC has put 26 kinescopes of its old Tales of Tomorrow show into syndication, first time such a thing has been done since the original Ruggles show slipped by on a kinescope basis . . . Hallmark's Hall of Fame will be hour-long every fourth Sunday, half-hour other weeks.

Motorola is dropping its hour-long Tuesday night dramatic show on ABC as of May 18--too expensive. The network, however, will continue the show, either on its own or with a new sponsor . . . The MICKEY ROONEY show, Hey, Mulligan, starts on NBC July 17--and should be a top-rated entry by the time September rolls around.

FORREST TUCKER will make a film series, Phantom Knight . . . Big Town is being revamped for next season, with reporter Steve Wilson moving to Managing Editor of "The Illustrated Press" and a format based on the newspaper itself rather than on Wilson. PAT McVEY is leaving. BEVERLY TYLER, the current Lorelei, is one of those being considered for the "Girl Friday" role.

The President on Television

Four Networks Cooperate on Mr. Eisenhower's Telecasts

THE ANNOUNCER makes his introduction, then says: "Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States."

On television screens in millions of American homes, there appears a relaxed Dwight Eisenhower, seated at his desk. He smiles, nods, and commences to speak.

It seems so simple and informal. Yet back of it are days of planning, arranging and rehearsing.

Here are the things that must happen before the President's friendly warmth comes into your living room.

Among the news correspondents who regularly cover the White House is a man for each of the four national television networks. They report the news and also act as liaison between the President and their home offices. On a rotating basis, each serves as "television pool chairman" for three months of the year.

When the President decides to talk to the people, White House Press Secretary James Hagerty contacts the pool chairman to tell him the date and hour. The pool chairman notifies his three colleagues, who advise their offices immediately.

The New York headquarters of the networks must clear the time. On the average, it costs them an aggregate of $125,000 to $150,000 each time the President of the United States addresses the American people on television. If he should talk overtime, it would cost many more thousands in cancelled programs.

NBC, CBS and ABC alternate in originating White House programs, with the originating web "feeding" all the others.

Three or four days before the telecast, technical experts meet at the White House with Hagerty and several other members of the President's staff to complete plans.

Time For Decision

They decide whether the show will originate in the President's office or in the White House TV room; whether the President should remain seated throughout or should walk to a chart or map to emphasize a point; whether he will read from a typed script, from large hand-lettered cue cards, or use a Teleprompter. This last is a mechanical gadget which flashes the manuscript—a line at a time—upon a glass screen placed just below the line of vision of the cameras.

Last December a new figure began to appear at these pre-telecast conferences: Robert Montgomery, former Hollywood star, now an NBC television producer and actor in his own show. Montgomery, an early Ike-for-President man, and a friend of Hagerty, was invited to help with the Christmas Eve tree-lighting telecast. He did so well that he has been an informal part of the White House staff ever since.

Because of his Hollywood background and his use of precision techniques of professional television, Montgomery was resented for a while as a usurper. These days, however, he is welcomed. As one network representative expressed it: "This is the first time since we began televising at the White House, with President Truman, that we are perfectly confident nothing will be snafued."

Montgomery gives this appraisal of his job: "The primary objective of my function, as I understand it, is not in any way to direct the President, not to make him give a performance. It is to make the President as comfortable as possible, so he can succeed in displaying his own personality, his own attitudes and his own movements, whatever he does or says. The President is most effective when no technical gimmick stands in his way of expressing himself."

On the morning of a program, a crew moves three cameras into the room selected. Lights are placed and mikes are checked, with a stand-in substituting for the President.

Here's how: The President shows Robert Montgomery a gesture he'll use on TV.

During these preliminaries, Robert Montgomery is on hand, observing and making suggestions.

On the afternoon before the telecast, the President generally goes through a complete rehearsal for the benefit of the networks. These rehearsals are under bright lights so that newsreel cameras may pick up highlights of the speech early, for speed in distribution.

On the night of a TV message to the Nation, the President wears a blue or gray shirt to eliminate glare. In the past, there has been a make-up man on hand. However, it has been decided that he photographs best with only a dab of powder to eliminate the shine on his bald head.

The number of people directly or indirectly involved in a White House telecast add up to a miniature station staff. The originating network will have on hand a network director, a television director, an audio engineer to control the microphone pick-up, a second audio man to feed the sound to the nets, a video engineer, an associate director to "cue" the President, three cameramen, a lighting expert and a TV announcer.

And Still More

On hand also are two Teleprompter technicians (when that device is used), plus announcers for the other networks. They introduce the President to their respective audiences. Add to this, still and newsreel photographers covering the speech for the press and movie houses.

Also standing by will be Robert Montgomery, Jim Hagerty, and others whom the President may invite because they worked with him in preparing the speech.

Things are always tense for the television crews. When the program is over, they heave a sigh of relief. Only a man in the business knows how many things might go wrong.

What does Mrs. Eisenhower do while the President is talking to the people? Like any good wife, she is keeping a watchful and anxious eye on one of the several television receivers in the White House. And, like any other wife, she is said to be her husband's severest critic.

TV's Sit-Down Artists Have Stand-Ins

Panelist and stand-in: Bill Cullen gives Roger Peterson's style the once-over.

WE'VE ALWAYS been told that TV panelists have the easiest job in television. But there's one that's even easier. It's "standing-in" for the panel-sitters on shows like I've Got a Secret. Stand-ins sub through every show prior to air time while the emcee warms up his moderating talents and camera and lighting crews test their equipment.

But don't rush to the nearest TV casting office. To hold such a job, you must be a registered member of the TV actors' union, and the pay is only $5 an hour. Besides, hundreds of unemployed TV actors vie for the few stand-in jobs available — on such Goodson-Todman shows as Secret, Judge for Yourself, Two for the Money and Beat the Clock.

The Secret stand-ins are Roger Peterson (for Bill Cullen), Jane Linden (Jayne Meadows), Bob Kamlot (Henry Morgan) and Esther Benson (for Polly Bergen). Why do they come to the studio on a Wednesday night for an hour's work at such low pay, when they know they'll never be seen by the viewing audience? They're all aspiring young TV actors and the Secret rehearsal gives them a chance to meet producers and directors, something most would-be actors can't do however often they "make the rounds."

Several stand-ins have obtained TV acting jobs because directors of panel shows, graduating to other programs, remembered them.

The work also provides valuable experience before the TV cameras. The hour-long stint teaches novices to be at ease before the probing lenses.

Why do the producers of Secret feel they need a stand-in panel? They claim the rehearsal gives Garry Moore a preview of the line of questioning the regular panel is apt to follow.

A more valid reason: the stand-in rehearsal alerts Garry to questions that might sound risque or too dull. Also, if the stand-ins guess a secret too quickly, the producers can substitute a more challenging problem.

The run-through also gives Garry a chance to get his facts straight. On a recent show, George Jessel was the surprise guest. His secret: in 1911 he used to bathe Eddie Cantor. During the trial run, a stand-in asked if Cantor and Jessel were in show business at the time. Garry answered no. He was immediately corrected by a production assistant: the two were then trouping together as kid actors.

The guest-contestants themselves do not rehearse. Their role is assumed by announcer John Cannon or a member of the production staff. The run-throughs usually last from 7:30 to 8:30 on Wednesday nights, before the studio audience files into the theater. There is nothing to prevent Cullen and Morgan, or the Misses Bergen and Meadows, from sneaking in ahead of time to watch the rehearsal and so learn each contestant's secret in advance. But they don't.

The idea of stand-in panelists was originated by CBS, which formerly employed them on all panel programs. The network later decided there was no need for run-throughs on such shows as What's My Line? Even so, Peterson and Miss Linden now have stand-in jobs on three or more shows per week.

On Beat the Clock, they test all the stunts emcee Bud Collyer has in store for the studio contestants. On Two for the Money, as make-believe contestants, they answer Herb Shriner's quizzers while the clock ticks away.

Peterson claims he has answered fast enough on a Shriner rehearsal to win up to $3,000. But, as a stand-in, his take-home pay was $5.

Garry Moore quizzes pre-air-time panel: Peterson (who subs for Cullen), Jane Linden (Jayne Meadows), Bob Kamlot (Henry Morgan), Esther Benson (Polly Bergen).

TELEVISION MAMAS HAVE REAL-LIFE FAMILIES, TOO

SCRATCH the surface of almost any TV situation comedy show these days and you'll find a non-TV family, complete with mother, father and kids. And no wonder. Almost every TV mother is a mother in real life and many situations on her show duplicate real-life experiences. (Exception: the madcap shenanigans of Lucille Ball.) Most TV mothers can celebrate Mother's Day in duplicate.

While Lucy is a real-life mother, too—little Desiderio Alberto Arnaz IV is probably the most famous baby since England's Bonnie Prince Charlie —the zany character she portrays on TV is only remotely linked to her off-screen activities, fortunately for her actual children.

The closest parallel between TV and real life is experienced by Harriet Nelson. That's because her two sons, David, 17, and Ricky, 13, play themselves in The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet, and her husband, Ozzie, is also her TV husband. Since, moreover, the TV show often is based on events that actually took place within the family, Harriet never feels she's acting a part.

Ozzie himself shares in the TV writing, checking with Harriet and the boys to make certain the dialogue sounds the way it does at home. The TV studio is furnished almost exactly like the Nelsons' home. According to Harriet, the chief difference between her TV and her real life is the fact that Ozzie, as director of the show, can boss her and the boys around on the set, while at home she is more often the boss. "Except," as Ozzie says, "Harriet is a softy and leaves the discipline up to me."

One of the best-known TV mothers is Peggy Wood. As the mama of Mama, she has become to most viewers almost the epitome of TV motherhood. Guesting on The Garry Moore Show recently, she invited questions from the studio audience. Most of them revolved about problems of raising a family. While it would be decidedly ungallant to reveal the age of any TV mother so near Mother's Day, it's no secret that Miss Wood is qualified by her real-life status to star in a show tagged Grandmama.

Jean Hagen, real mother of two, with TV children Rusty Hamer, Sherry Jackson.

Another TV mother who's really a grandmother is Gertrude Berg, the Tremont Avenue matriarch of The Goldbergs. The mother of two teenagers on TV, Mrs. Berg actually has two grown children. One of them, son Cherney, is producer of her TV show.

It might also be tactless to pinpoint the youngest TV mother. But a candidate, certainly, is Florence Halop, of Meet Millie. Although, with the help of a good make-up job, she plays the mother of beauteous Elena Verdugo, Miss Halop is only 29.

As Danny Thomas' wife in Make Room for Daddy, Jean Hagen mothers two of the most precocious kids on TV, Sherry Jackson and Rusty Hamer. In real life, Jean is married to Tom Seidel, a talent agent, and is also the mother of two—Patricia Christine, who'll be four in August, and Aric Philip, two. Because her TV children are older, they're furnishing Jean with ideas on how to cope with problems coming up in the future.

Neither of her children has ever watched Jean perform on TV. She says she doesn't want them to become confused about another husband and children for their Mommy.

Fay Wray, mother of the Morrisons in TV's Pride of the Family, has three children—Susan, 17, Bobby, 10, and Vicki, 8. On TV, she and Paul Hartman, who plays Albie Morrison, have only two, Natalie Wood and Bobby Hyatt. Since they're about the same age as her real children, Fay occasionally encounters the same situations with both families. On TV, Albie recently tried, unsuccessfully, to persuade the kids to cut down on their TV-viewing. In her own home, Fay complains that her kids take their dinner plates to the TV set and stay there the rest of the evening.

Fay's children watch her show, but they have never criticized nor praised her acting. Instead, they voice opinions only on the show as a whole.

"I can't imagine my TV offspring failing to express an opinion on any actions of their parents," says Fay. Her TV daughter is an always-on-the-go teen-ager. Her real teen-age daughter, Susan, is quite different—a serious-minded high school senior interested in classical music and drama.

Marjorie Reynolds, the wife of Riley in The Life of Riley, is the mother of a seven-year-old daughter, Linda. In Riley, she and William Bendix are parents of teen-agers Lugene Sanders and Wesley Morgan.

Puppy-Love, Powder 'N' Paint

Before Lugene was married, she confided in Marjorie on the set, asking advice about dates, make-up, etc. Marjorie, who had realized her TV reactions would be subject to criticism from the millions of real-life mothers who watch the show, had made a study of teen-age problems and so was prepared to offer Lugene common-sense advice. Some day her own daughter, Linda, will also profit from this extracurricular research.

Lurene Tuttle, mother of the four red-headed Day boys in Life with Father, is the mother of an actress linked with another Day on TV—Barbara Ruick, who appears on The Dennis Day Show as Dennis' lambie pie. Mother and daughter recently played roles in the same movie.

June Erwin, mother of two in TV's Stu Erwin Show, in real life has the same husband but two different children—Stu, Jr., 21, and Judy, 18.

Chicago Dateline

TV's Week: Good news for Animal Playtime fans: WBKB announced this week that Uncle Win Stracke will bring his animal playmates to Channel 7, effective May 17. The name will be changed, but the show will follow its former pattern. Looks like public opinion paid off again.

A new 100 percent boost in power of WBKB, announced this week, will make Channel 7 the strongest in the city, according to their engineers. Deadline date for the increase (from 100 to 200 kilowatts) is May 20, but it may come as early as May 9. It all depends on the weather which will determine how soon the new transmitting antenna can be erected.

Menard

WBBM-TV's Farmtown U.S.A. passed its second milestone May 2 with capable George Menard still at the helm. George, incidentally, enjoyed some national fame recently through his piped-in appearances on CBS' Morning Show.

Remember WBKB's Trade-Inn of a few years back? A show similar to it, titled S.H.E. (Serve, Help and Entertain), debuted on Channel 7 last Saturday, featuring non-pro Pat Banks as hostess. A sort of classified column of the air, S.H.E. moved into the 3 to 3:45 PM, May 2), some changes were made. Duggan into the 6 PM period.

Before Fabulous You even got off the ground on WBBM-TV Sunday (10:45 PM, May 2), some changes were made. Maggie Daly was replaced by makeup expert Syd Simons and Jacqueline MacKenzie (costuming and clothes authority). A hair stylist is yet to be named.

Week's Highlights: For the first time in its TV history, Faith of Our Fathers will feature a Catholic series on its WGN-TV show (7:30 PM Sundays). The three-week series will describe and interpret the Mass. It starts this week.

Advance Tips on Shows: Producer Ben Park and writer Bill Barrett (the Hawkins Falls combo) are prepping a new soap opera, Member of The Press, to originate from Chicago on the NBC network by mid-June. Story line will concern adventures of a small town girl reporter in the big city.

special events staff-

BACK in the days of cutthroat newspaper tactics, the "extra" was a sure-fire circulation booster. When TV arrived, the printed extra gave way to a video version—the special events department of a station.

One such staff came through in such commendable fashion last spring that it made possible the station's winning TV GUIDE's award for outstanding coverage of a special event. The event was the attempted suicide from Tribune Towers. The station was WBBM-TV, Chicago's baby among video outlets. But its well-organized crew was no infant in the field of news gathering.

Boasting one of the largest local news staffs in the country (27 people), WBBM-TV was ready for action the day of the news break. "Its readiness can be attributed to flexibility of personnel, plus the news editor's privilege to cut into any program," claims newsroom manager Bill Garry. After the young woman was spotted, it was only a matter of clearing time through the program director. (That morning, WBBM-TV had the audacity to cut off Godfrey and Strike It Rich in favor of the televised suicide attempt.) Says Bill: "No one ever questions a news editor's authority to interrupt a show, but the special event had better be pretty darn important after it's on!"

WBBM-TV's studio position was probably one of the most decisive factors in televising the harrowing episode. From its location atop the 190 N. State Street building, cameras could be trained almost directly on the Tribune Towers point where the young woman was huddled.

Standby announcer Ray Rayner was on duty. And even the cameramen

Letters to the Editor

YOU TELL TELEVISION

Please address all letters to Managing Editor, c/o TV GUIDE, 731 S. Plymouth Court, Chicago 5, Ill.

How're Ya Fixed For Aspirin?

To me, Jane Froman is one of the biggest pains on television. She can't sing and she's awful to look at. They ought to give her time to girls like Jo Stafford and Patti Page. These girls can really sing.—Bob Sorensen, Racine, Wis.

Froman

Memo to Mrs. Stamper

Don't feel bad about your two month old phrase being used on Down You Go even though someone else got the credit. I had the same thing happen with a phrase that I sent in two years ago. I still watch the show because I have yet to find a more educated and down-to-earth group of people than Dr. Evans and his gang.—Mrs. Frank Cason, Silver Lake, Wis.

Another Nelson Pin-Up, Please

I saw the picture of Ricky Nelson and would like one of his brother David. Please tell me where I could get one.—Marietta Zriny, Michigan City, Ind. (You can get photos of any or all of the Nelsons by writing them at ABC, Hollywood 27, Calif.—Ed.)

Let's Move Miller

Can't something be done to get Howard Miller's Close-Up on at a later time? At 5:30 most people are either coming from work or sitting down to dinner and, consequently, this show is not getting the success it deserves.—Mrs. William Jones, Chicago, Ill. (We suggest you write NBC, Merchandise Mart, Chicago.—Ed.)

The Educational TV Situation

What happened to Channel 11? For a while that was all we seemed to hear about, but suddenly it seemed to fade into nothing. Will anything come of it? —Joanne Allen, Evanston, Ill. (Plans are moving along as scheduled. However, they still are seeking contributions for operating capital. If you'd care to help, send your contribution to Chicago Educational Television Assoc., 38 S. Dearborn, Chicago, Ill.—Ed.)

More on Duffy and Mask

There was an article in TV GUIDE about Duffy's Tavern and The Mask being on television, but no mention of day, time or channel. We readers look forward to new programs, but it's difficult to know just when to view them. How about telling us these things?—B. Perry, Aurora, Ill. (Duffy's Tavern is not seen in Chicago. The Mask is on WBKB Sundays at 7 PM.—Ed.)

Twins In Specs Only

Are Steve Allen, of What's My Line, and George Reeves, of Superman, the same person or are they related? They certainly look alike to me.—Jill Wunderlich, Joliet, Ill. (We've noticed the resemblance, too. They are not related, however.—Ed.)

Reeves

The Hastings' Case

Is Don Hastings, who plays the Video Ranger on Captain Video, any relation to Bob Hastings, who used to be on Atom Squad and is now appearing on Captain Video?—Patti Brabond, Evanston, Ill. (They're cousins.—Ed.)

All times are Chicago Daylight Saving Time. In Standard Time areas, subtract one hour.

Are The Cubs Worth It? . . .

IT'S time Ralph Kiner, zealous National League player-representative, took off his blinkers. After almost forfeiting baseball's pension plan last winter, the expensive Cub outfielder served notice that the Cubs must be paid a minimum $100 fee for TV appearances. And it put Kiner in line for an award of some sort for sheer gall and punk public relations.

In his zest for greenbacks, Kiner has forgotten that his fat pay checks are due to the free publicity accorded him by radio, TV and the press. Where would the Cubs be today if the newspapers and airwaves stopped covering their antics on the diamond?

Kiner

Kiner and the Cubs would be wise to take their cues from show folks. These entertainers, many of whom are more important than Kiner, wisely capitalize on free publicity—knowing it will eventually increase their demand and income.

Conversely, Chicago sportscasters should charge the brassy Bruins a fee any time that Cub publicitor Cliffe Jaffe calls to have one of his Cubs appear as a guest.

We, frankly, do not feel that the Cubs are worth $100.

Most severely hit by this edict are Bob Elson, Jack Drees, Jack Brickhouse and Norm Barry. How do they feel about it? Can their sponsors absorb the cost? We'll have more on the subject next week.

All times are Chicago Daylight Saving Time. In Standard Time areas, subtract one hour.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

Annie Oakley

No tenderfoot: Cowpoke Gene Autry welcomes Annie Oakley (Gail Davis) to TV.

TV, in one fell swoop, has accomplished something that Hollywood has been trying to do since the days of William S. Hart: inject a new note into Western movies.

And it was such a simple maneuver. Instead of the intrepid cowboy, TV came up with a cowgirl by name of Annie Oakley, which automatically means that instead of a Western hero, we have a Western heroine. As played by Gail Davis in this new telefilm series, she's a cinch to be liked not only by the small fry but by adult adherents of the outdoor drama as well.

The idea of a cowgirl heroine may be new but the story ideas in the telefilms are not. Our gal Annie, like countless cowboys before her, is upholding law and justice in the best traditions of "they went that-a-way" drama and she does a fine job.

The show is filmed by Gene Autry's Flying A Enterprises, the same outfit that gives us the Gene Autry Show and Range Rider. Each episode is packed with enough action to satisfy even the most avid pistol-packin' viewer, whether Annie and her "pardners" are saving a stagecoach line or backing up an aging sheriff who is a little slow on the draw. Since Annie is a female-type gal, she doesn't get into any knockdown, drag-out affairs with the villains. But the way she handles those six-shooters, she doesn't have to use her fists.

Miss Davis is a natural for the title role. Besides being a beauty, she's a fair little actress and can ride and shoot with the best of them. The scripts give her little opportunity for romance but she has a tall, good-looking hombre for a partner who backstops her exploits neatly. He's Brad Johnson, playing the role of Deputy Sheriff Lofty Craig—a fine name if we ever heard one. Jimmy Hawkins plays Annie's kid brother, Tagg, giving the show another sure-fire lure for the younger set.

I LED THREE LIVES

FBI's eye: Richard Carlson as Herbert Philbrick in I Led Three Lives.

WITH THE Communist problem prominent in the Nation's headlines, it's a natural for a TV show. But I Led Three Lives, the telefilm series dedicated to the Red hunt, is beginning to show signs of wear. While there are many industries in this country into which Communists can infiltrate, Three Lives ran through the list and then bogged down into another cops-and-robbers series.

The program is based on the exploits of Herbert T. Philbrick, who actually led three lives—as a private citizen, as an undercover agent for the FBI and as a pseudo-Communist. When the show could stick to the facts in Philbrick's lives, it was a good, taut thriller. But once the script writers took over, the quality went down.

Richard Carlson is suitably grim in the Philbrick role. With little chance for humor or romance, he manages to inject plenty of warmth and personal charm into his portrayal. His supporting players are competent and generate as much realism and action as possible.—R. S.

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

METROPOLITAN to combine four operas for TV viewers. It's the biggest dose of culture since Liberace.

It will practically be like the Milton Berle show—with spears.

The program goes from Pagliacci to Boheme to Aida, which sounds more like a double play than a triple opera. Then they bring in the Barber of Seville, in case anybody wants a haircut after all the longhair stuff.

For this program, the sign at the Met probably will read: "Four operas —no waiting."

Putting four operas together makes the plot a little confusing, but so did the composers. It's a nice system, because all the people who get killed in the first opera can go back to work in the second opera. One guy is on the stage in all four operas—dead or alive.

He complained about coming back after the death scene, so they wrote in a birth scene.

The show will be a treat for one fan. He thinks Pagliacci is what you pour over the ravioli.

CIGARET

MADE HIM AN

ABLE KANE

ANNUALLY, for the past four years, the sponsor and the advertising agency men who produce a certain mystery show have huddled in secret conclave to elect a new private eye in a kind of Madison Avenue coronation game. Last August the boys crowned their most recent sleuth — the handsome, tight - lipped movie star, Mark Stevens.

It was a pretty simple ceremony when Mark was solemnly invested as Martin Kane, IV. His royal robe was an old hand-me-down trench coat, worn thin by his three predecessors, fellows named Gargan, Nolan and Tracy. Only other difference was that Kane, IV was handed a package of cigarets instead of a pipe.

On that TV prop hangs the story of the last Kane change. The election, it seems, was swung on Stevens' preference in tobacco. Had he been a pipe-smoker, the tobacco sponsor would have come up with another private eye, one who dragged on cigarets exclusively. Or, at least, that's what the sponsor's spokesmen say. As for Stevens, he says he wouldn't have been interested in the job if he had to take up the briar habit. Which is real parallel thinking between a sponsor who'd rather push his ciggies than his pipe tobacco and an actor who likes his nicotine wrapped in paper.

The demise of the show's pipe trademark only goes to point up what has happened to the old Martin Kane, Private Eye. Since movie idol Stevens appeared on the scene as Kane, IV, many things have undergone change.

Before he took the role from Lee Tracy he demanded (1) that "Private Eye" be dropped from the show's title in favor of "detective"; (2) that six writers instead of two be hired; (3) that the police should not be represented as idiots; (4) that Kane would not be called "Marty" ("It's a corny name, not masculine enough," says Stevens); and (5) that the commercial bit about stopping off at a tobacco counter on the way to a murder be eliminated.

Mark got his way. Result: the ratings have gone up and even the critics are being nice to the more refined, cigaret-smoking Kane.

Soft Eyes?

But shades of Sam Spade and Mike Hammer! TV private eyes have gone soft. They're big buddies with the cops. They rush by a shapely blonde, all business, like they were wearing blinders. They even talk like cops—no more such gaudy patter as "You'll be picking iron out of your liver" leveled at a crook. Even the trench coat has been retired for a conventional topcoat. What about it? Martin Kane, IV, was asked. What happened to the cynical Kane, the guy who said he'd take a case "if it puts enough bucks in the piggy bank?"

Crooks In Cellophane

Stevens had a ready answer. "I was determined that this should be an authentic show. We avoid phoniness. Call it realism if you like. Detectives like Kane are hard workers, pluggers —not master-minds and wise guys. Cops like Lieutenant Gray are cut from the same cloth. The legendary private eye is a myth, sometimes a laughable one. That business about the slick 'eye' solving the case himself, then handing over the crooks wrapped in cellophane paper to the dim-witted police is nonsense.

"Another fallacy is unnecessary violence. If I can possibly avoid a brawl written into the script, I'll ask for it to be eliminated. A fight for fight's sake is phony. I think the viewers like it better that way too. And we must be making headway. Many of the listings now label the show 'drama.' That's what we're trying to establish.

At home: Mark, his wife and two children. She was 'Miss Texas.'

Buddies: Kane and Lt. Gray (King Calder) help each other.

"You'll notice," Stevens went on, "Gray and Kane are very friendly and have a great respect for each other. That's the way it is intended. The police get their just desert for the part they play. Now, I haven't the slightest idea of what Martin Kane was like before I came on it. I only saw it once. I don't know whether I'm playing it differently from the other three or not. The only fellow I'm playing is Mark Stevens."

Mark admitted he was a little apprehensive about being too young (he's 31) for the role in the eyes of the viewers, but of course that was exactly what the sponsor had in mind "because cigaret smoking is associated more with a younger man," as one agency man put it.

No Dragnet Theme

Now that Martin Kane has moved more to the right in portraying a private eye—pardon, detective—there are other problems. Asked why the camera angles on Kane stressed long shots instead of close-ups, Mark admitted there was a fear of being accused of echoing the Dragnet technique.

"Because our dialogue and situations are so real, we steer clear of the extremely tight head-shots so noticeable on Webb's show, because first thing you know people will start saying, 'Humph, just like Dragnet,' and that we don't want."

No Mark Vs. Martin

Stevens has yet to be haunted by having one of his old movies pop up on TV as competition for Martin Kane. Most aren't eligible by the much-maligned TV flicker standards. He made 18 movies out Hollywood way and all but two were "A" pictures. Some of his best were "Snake Pit," "Street With No Name," "Dark Mirror." Last winter he appeared on Broadway in a play called "Midsummer," which was marred by some unfavorable publicity revolving around child-actress Jenny Hecht, daughter of playwright Ben Hecht. The backstage squabbles, temperamental flare-ups and the lurid tabloid coverage of the alleged dissension between the moppet and himself soured Mark on the Great White Way. "I'll never do a Broadway show again," he says, adamantly.

Mark In Manhattan

Mark lives in a Manhattan apartment with his wife, the former "Miss Texas of 1944." Their two kids, seven-year-old Mark Richard and Arrelle, age two and a half, were sent to California for the winter months. Right now they are eagerly waiting for Pop to come back to make his next movie this summer.

Meantime, Kane, IV is nabbing an average of slightly over one hood per week and hasn't yet dawdled around a cigar stand when he should be out hot on the trail. Although the sponsor has been playing musical chairs with Martin Kane for four years now, Mark looks pretty secure at this writing. That is, unless they decide to start pushing snuff instead of cigarets.

Artists Go To Work On TV—History's Biggest Canvas

ARTISTS, magazine illustrators and cartoonists are finally getting a chance to show their wares on TV. Studio One, the CBS dramatic program, last spring experimented with using an original drawing as the title card for each program. The idea drew such good response that title drawings, created by some of the best artists in the business, have become a regular feature of the show.

Among the artists represented is Dong Kingman, whose work has won several prizes. He launched this season's series with his impressionistic title card for the dramatization of George Orwell's book, "1984." Marcel Vertes, who won an Academy Award for his sets in the "Moulin Rouge" movie, did the title card for "Camille." Also contributing to new artistic values on Studio One are such well-known New Yorker cartoonists as Charles Addams, Syd Hoff, Richard Taylor and William Steig.

Other programs have adopted the idea, including U.S. Steel Hour and Philip Morris Playhouse.

The use of title drawings was conceived by Georg Olden, CBS-TV's graphic arts director. Each artist who contributes to the series is sent a script of the show, and given free rein.

Olden said the idea is basically the same as that governing the use of dust jackets for books. Each artist attempts to capture the mood of a story in a single image. "And just as the dust jackets attract people to buy the book, so we hope to attract people to stay tuned to Studio One once they have seen the title drawings," Olden said.

REGIONAL RECIPES:

IN MILWAUKEE, IT'S

chocolate BEER cake???

MILWAUKEE is known as "The Beer Capital of the World." What more logical place, then, for the introduction of a Beer Cake?

Via their neighbors of German descent, Milwaukeeans have learned to smack their lips over palate-pampering foods like Sauerbraten, Kalbhaxen, Bratwurst, Apple Strudel and Koenigsberger Klops.

Now Trudy Beilfuss, who presides over the Home Cooking show on WOKY-TV, has come up with a new candidate for local favor.

The idea of blending beer and chocolate may make eyebrows jump, but the proof of Miss Beilfuss' recipe is in the eating, not the reading.

Local consensus: It's wonderful.

Footnote from the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce: It tastes best if made with a Milwaukee beer.

Chocolate Beer Cake

1/3 c. butter; 1 c. sugar; 2 eggs, seporoted; 2 squares unsweetened chocolate (melted & coaled); 1 ¾ c. sifted cake flour; 1 t. baking pawder; ¼ t. baking soda; ½ t. salt; ¾ c. cold beer.

Cream butter, add sugor slowly. Beot well. Add egg yalks one ot o time, beoting until well blended. Add chocolote. Beat until smooth.

Mix ond sift flour, boking pawder, soda ond salt three times. Add alternately with beer . . . o little at o time. Add the beoten egg whites.

Boke in oblang pon (7 x 11 x 2) ot 375 degrees 30 min. or until done.

Baked with brew: Trudy Beilfuss blends beer and chocolate in delicious cake.

SPORTS

Color TV No Knockout

WHEN NBC decided to telecast a fist fight in color, a special gray carpeting was laid in the Madison Square Garden ring, the fighters were trigged out in formal attire—blue trunks with a gold stripe for one, gold panties with blue stripe for the other—and the seconds got gray sweaters bearing their warriors' names in blue lettering.

The raiment was chosen for beauty's sweet sake; the gray ring canvas was ordained because white reflects too much light. The color that interested everyone, though, was red.

Chances are all who sat in on the show were asked the same questions by those who hadn't seen it: "Was there blood? How did it look?"

Well, there was a little blood but it could not be seen. One of the fighters was cut but the viewers had to take Jimmy Powers' word for that. There were no closeups big enough to show the faces in detail.

At the outset, a pale blue wash leaked across the picture from the ring edges toward the middle. The blue trunks looked black, the gold ones orange or perhaps terra-cotta pink. As the bout went on and camera followed the fighters the shades changed; generally they were true and rather pleasantly subdued.

One of the men watching in a projection room downstairs in the Center Theater remarked, "The punches seem harder in color. More realism."

He may have been alone in this notion. What did become apparent to everybody was a quality of depth that the black-and-white picture doesn't have. In color there are nuances, shadings and tones, which create a three-dimensional illusion.

One thing color can't do, though: it doesn't help you follow a fight more closely and judge it more accurately. The camera angles remain unchanged. You're still unsure whether this punch landed or missed. You can disagree with the officials as violently and condemn them as vituperatively as anybody with a black-and-white set.

Consequently, the impression here is that commercial color will contribute less to televised reproduction in boxing than in other sports. In baseball, the contrast helps enormously. Against the green background, the white ball can be followed.

Boxing, however, is going to look very much as always. Unless the gore really gushes no dear old girls are going to be offended.

There's No Place Like HOME

ONE of the most gadget-happy sets ever designed for a TV show is now in daily use on NBC's new Home show. The set, filling one of NBC's largest studios, was built at a cost of $200,000. It was created, according to the network, to "display and demonstrate the products, materials, processes and procedures related to . . . home and home living."

The Home program is labeled a "woman's service magazine of the air." Arlene Francis is the emcee, interviewing visiting celebrities or introducing the various "editors" of the show's feature segments.

Among the set's unusual features are: a "growery," a two-foot-thick plot of earth used for the gardening segment of the show; the "tumbler," a device that will lift, turn or revolve any object weighing up to 300 pounds, and the "elementery," a device permitting the producers to recreate the elements—it says here. Thus, if the script calls for models to display galoshes, the gadget will provide snow. The set was designed by Sol Cornberg, staff designer in NBC's Staging Services department.

The set also boasts an aerial camera capable of shooting down from a height of 20 feet; a "spiral pickup" to raise and turn rugs, draperies, etc.; a demonstration workshop for hardware and tools; a completely equipped kitchen, and an area containing TV sets which present out-of-town experts and show what's being telecast from the big, busy Home set.
